

Our Ref: MH/393/0609

Consultation and Engagement Centre
Surface Transport Communications
Transport for London

11th Floor, Zone B2, Palestra
197 Blackfriars Road
London SE1 8NJ

15 June 2009

STEngagement@tfl.gov.uk

Dear Resident

Bus route 393 consultation

During March, April and May 2009 Transport for London consulted stakeholders and local residents about the extension of route 393 to Chalk Farm which was introduced in July 2007.

A number of people continued to be dissatisfied with the current routeing and suggested an alternative route for the buses to take. The consultation was conducted so that we could understand the needs and views of users and people living on and near to the extended route.

We have now considered the results, a summary of which is enclosed. This document also contains our response to the main points raised. A copy can also be found on our website at <http://www.tfl.gov.uk/busrouteconsultation>.

In general there was substantial support for the route to remain as it is now. There was also a majority of support from those responding who live on roads that had not previously had a bus service.

Therefore, having fully considered the relevant issues we have decided to retain route 393 on its current routeing.

Yours sincerely

Peter Bradley
Head of Consultation and Engagement Centre
Surface Transport
Transport for London
STEngagement@tfl.gov.uk